Board of Directors

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

by Amy Wolfe
LWVSC President

Dear LWVSC Members and Friends,

What an incredible start to the new year! First, we launched the LWVSC Book Club and our coordinator, Denise Nordell, truly outdid herself. We were joined online by the author, the Honorable LaDoris Hazzard Cordell, retired, who shared the stories behind her story. She also offered her perspective on our current judicial landscape, as well as fun tidbits about the bringing her book to life. Ms. Hazzard Cordell was articulate, engaging, personable, and did a superb job of telling her story.

The very next day, we held a deeply informative Meet and Learn luncheon featuring Becky Hackler Arellano, the first female member of the Turlock Irrigation District Board of Directors. Becky provided thoughtful perspective into the challenges facing TID, along with the groundbreaking innovations they are piloting. As the first irrigation district in California, TID continues to lead the way in research, unique partnerships and finding ways to do more with less of this precious resource.

Two more Book Club dates have been selected for the year, as have two books. Save the dates and get a jump on the reading now! Details are provided at the end of this newsletter.

Join us February 19th for our next Meet and Learn Luncheon, where we are welcoming Amanda Hughes, Stanislaus 2030 Executive Director. Amanda is coming to provide an overview of the organization's mission and specifically, their current initiative meant to address the child care shortages plaguing our community. Amanda is a dynamic and passionate speaker - you won't want to miss it!

LWVSC Book Club - Her Honor, by LaDoris Hazzard Cordell

On January 21, 2026, LWVSC's first book club event was held at the Salida Library Community Room, welcoming author LaDoris Hazzard Cordell, whose memoir, Her Honor, provided insights into the work of a California Superior Court Judge. More than 25 attended, joined on video by Judge Cordell.

Appointed by Governor Jerry Brown in 1982, Judge Cordell was the first African-American female judge in California. She served as a judge in Santa Clara County to her retirement.

She began her talk with commending the League of Women Voters for the work we do; she believes voting is essential in our democracy. She quoted Coretta Scott King: "Exercising the right to vote can change society."

Describing her book, Judge Cordell noted that she wrote letters to her parents once a week for 8 years, describing her work. During a visit, her mother pulled out the stacks of letters. As the judge read them, she was struck by the number of cases and their variety she'd experienced. The idea of a book began to form.

Each chapter highlights a case and its details - victims and defendants, laws that were broken, attorneys, probation and police officers - and how the results seemed fair or not. Judge Cordell reminded the audience that judges have to follow the rule of law in making their decisions. However, in retirement, she is outspoken about the failings of the legal system and suggests changes to fix what is broken. Chapters in the book include titles meant to evoke the reader's curiosity:

- "Where There's a Will" - a man left money in his will to his cats.
- "Bad Judges" - how complaints are investigated at the state level.
- "Thank You for Your Service" - the importance and impact of serving on juries.
- "Judges for Sale," - when a judge is elected instead of appointed, large amounts of money are contributed, usually by lawyers, which could influence the judge's decisions.

During a lively Q & A portion of her talk, Judge Cordell provided a number of insights:

- She always wanted to work in the law to help people.
- In her opinion, cameras in the courtroom are good because they make the public more aware, but "TV judges" take away the seriousness of the job at hand for judges.
- She thinks law schools should offer courses in judging; none do at this time.
- Being aware of her own bias helped her treat the defendants in her court more fairly.

LWVSC thanks Denise Nordell, coordinator of the LWVSC Book Club, for a great event.

LWVSC Meet and Learn Event

Becky Hackler Arellano
Turlock Irrigation District Board
January 22, 2026

LWVSC welcomed Turlock Irrigation District Board Member Becky Hackler Arellano at Gather in Modesto to discuss her service on the Turlock Irrigation District board and the numerous projects undertaken by the District to provide irrigation water for farmers and electricity to a number of communities.

Director Arellano emphasized the need for TID to work cooperatively with other agencies, such as Hetch Hetchy Water and Power, run by San Francisco's Public Utilities Commission, and the Modesto Irrigation District. By working together and coming to consensus, they can move forward together to provide affordable water and power to their constituencies.

TID partners with agencies such as NASA to gain weather and snowpack data, with UC Merced to train engineers and with UC San Diego's Scripps Institution of Oceanography to understand atmospheric rivers and their effects.

Some current TID projects are:

- Raise San Pedro Dam two feet to provide more storage;
- Place solar panels over four miles of canals to prevent water evaporation and produce energy;
- Place floating solar panels over a water basin to provide energy and feed the aquifer.

LWVSC President Amy Wolfe thanked Director Arellano for providing timely information about water, our area's most precious resource.

The Woman's Hour: The Great Fight to Win the Vote
by Elaine Weiss

Nashville, August 1920. Thirty-five states have approved the 19th Amendment, granting women the right to vote; one last state-Tennessee-is needed for women's voting rights to be the law of the land. The suffragists face vicious opposition from politicians, clergy, corporations, and racists who don't want black women voting. And then there are the "Antis"-women who oppose their own enfranchisement, fearing suffrage will bring about the nation's moral collapse. And in one hot summer, they all converge for a confrontation, replete with booze and blackmail, betrayal and courage.

Join us as we expand our understanding of our 250-year-old experiment called Democracy through the reading and discussion of both fiction and nonfiction. Learn more at lqvstanislaus.org or contact Book Club Coordinator Denise Nordell at 209-840-8825 or denisenordell@gmail.com
