Economic Incentives and Policy Options for

Increasing Healthcare Access in South Carolina

The one-hour presentation will describe the current state of healthcare access in South Carolina with a focus on the counties with the highest percentages of uninsured. Additionally, panelists will discuss financial benefits and various state and national policies aimed at increasing healthcare access in South Carolina. The panel includes several providers who can give their perspectives from the front lines of healthcare.

David Keely, M.D., is a family medicine and public health physician who has been practicing in South Carolina for the past 42 years.

He is a consultant on community-level public health and wellness projects, especially ones that promote evidence-based, "common-sense," regional and community level policy, environment, and systems change for a healthier America in the 21st century. His focus areas over the course of his career have been tobacco product use prevention and cessation support, along with childhood obesity mitigation.

Over the past ten years, Dr. Keely has become a health activist in the area of healthcare system reform in the United States. He currently is President of Healthcare for All-South Carolina, a state-wide chapter of the Physicians for a National Health Program national organization, whose mission is to bring universal, equitable, sustainable, and affordable health care to the entire U.S. population through an improved and expanded "Medicare for All" single-payer financed model.

Elizabeth A. Brown, Ph.D., M.P.A., is an academic educator and health services researcher who focuses on social determinants of health (SDOH), particularly race/ethnicity, access to primary care, health care policy, and chronic conditions. She has published several research articles about Medicaid expansion and its impact on healthcare access.

Dr. Brown is the Health Policy Director for the League of Women Voters of the Charleston Area and serves as Co-Chair of the State League's Healthcare Work Group. She is a member of AcademyHealth, which is the national Health Services Research (HSR) organization. She served on AcademyHealth's State Health Research Interest Group Advisory Committee (2019-2021).

Dr. Brown was a Southern Regional Education Board (SREB) Fellow (2015-2018) and was recognized for her scholarly work by both AcademyHealth and MUSC. In 2021, she was awarded MUSC President's Values in Action Award for Respect. Dr. Brown received her undergraduate degree in English-Journalism from Columbia College in Columbia, South Carolina, and her Ph.D. in Health & Rehabilitation Science (health services research) from MUSC.

Paul DeMarco, M.D., was raised in Charleston, South Carolina. He attended college at the University of Virginia and medical school at USC School of Medicine in Columbia.

Dr. DeMarco returned to UVA to complete a residency and chief residency in general internal medicine. He became interested in the uninsured as a resident and, along with many others, helped start the Charlottesville Free Clinic. He served as the first president of the clinic's board from 1992-1993.

Dr. DeMarco currently practices for HopeHealth, the community health center serving Florence and Williamsburg counties. Caring for patients in the Pee Dee has strengthened his conviction about the need for universal healthcare in America.

Dr. DeMarco is a board member of Marion County Habitat for Humanity, the Marion County Library System, and the Eastern Carolina Community Foundation. He is married and has two adult children.

Lynn Engelberg Glenn Ph.D., APRN-C, is an assistant professor at the Augusta University College of Nursing, an Advanced Practice Registered Nurse for the Department of Biobehavioral Nursing and Institute of Public and Preventive Health, and a Certified Adult Nurse Practitioner, Orangeburg Calhoun Free Medical Clinic.

Dr. Glenn holds degrees from the University of Missouri-Columbia (Ph.D. in Nursing,) the University of Pennsylvania (M.S.N.), and Vanderbilt University (Nursing).

She has worked for 30 years as a nurse practitioner serving rural, underserved, and underinsured adults with chronic disease.

Dr. Glenn has recently published an article, "Microresearch: Promoting Scholarly Activity That Addresses Health Disparities in Rural Health Professional Education Programs," in the Journal of Health Care for the Poor and Underserved and has served as a peer reviewer for several medical journals.

Dr. Glenn plans to advocate for equitable access to healthcare among underserved populations as her primary professional service objective.

Saturday Sessions

General Assembly Preview

The 2022 legislative session begins on January 11, 2022. Lynn Teague, LWVSC lobbyist and VP for Issues and Action, will discuss what we can expect from the South Carolina General Assembly.

Redistricting continues; election and voting issues will be prominent. There will certainly be significant bills affecting public education and public health including women's reproductive health.

League members will want to be prepared as active constituents reaching out to legislators and educating the public during this busy legislative year.

Redistricting Wind-Down

What We Gained and What We Lost

After many rounds of League testimony, South Carolina House and Senate maps for the next ten years have been approved by the General Assembly. However, Congressional maps will still be under consideration in January.

LWVSC Redistricting Director and Clemson University School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences Professor Matt Saltzman and Shayna Howell, his LWVSC Redistricting Work Group Co-Facilitator, will analyze what has been gained, lost, and what may yet be to come.

What About Civics? Civics Education in SC Schools

Civics education in South Carolina: What's happening in our classrooms today? Hear directly from our panel of S.C. teachers and educators.

Patrick Kelly is Director of Governmental Affairs for the S.C. Palmetto Teachers Association, also serving on the governing boards of the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) and the S.C. Center for Educator Recruitment, Retention and Advancement (CERRA).

In these roles, Mr. Kelly reviews both federal and state education policy, standards, and curriculum. He regularly testifies before South Carolina legislative committees regarding bills impacting the state's public schools, teachers, budget, and curriculum. Mr. Kelly is an instructor of AP government and politics in Richland District Two.

Rebecca Mueller, Ph.D., is an assistant professor of Social Studies Education at USC Upstate. Her research focuses on teachers' use of inquiry and questioning in the social studies classroom. She co-edited a National Council for the Social Studies Bulletin: Teaching the C3 Framework: Exploring Inquiry-Based Instruction in Social Studies.

Prior to joining the USC Upstate faculty, Dr. Mueller was a nationally certified secondary instructor in Lexington, Kentucky.

Marc Turner is the president-elect of the South Carolina Council for Social Studies and co-chairman of the South Carolina Council for History Education. The state Council for Social Studies has developed a detailed policy statement on civics education, which can be viewed on its website. Established in 2000, the South Carolina Council for History Education provides guidance and professional development for the state's K-12 social studies standards.

Mr. Turner teaches honors and AP level courses in history, government, and economics in Lexington/Richland District Five.

Staying Nonpartisan in Hyper-Partisan Times

Is it possible to be nonpartisan in hyper-partisan times?

Participate in a thought-provoking presentation along with real-life scenarios for break-out groups to discuss and provide options/solutions.

The session will be led by Sharda Jackson Smith, LWVSC Director of National Issues and Action, and JoAnne Day, LWVSC Director of State Program, past LWVSC Co-President, and a commissioner since 2020 on the South Carolina Election Commission.
