A team of new and returning board members has been at work since our last newsletter, planning a full and active year for the League of Women Voters of the Jackson Area.

First, let me introduce myself – your new president. I am the daughter of a long line of grain farmers from Iowa, I am a journalist by training but have been working in nonprofit programming for several years, currently with the Mississippi Humanities Council where I have directed a grants program since 2005. I am married to an epidemiologist who teaches in the Jackson State University School of Public Health, and we have two daughters, ages 13 and 14. We are a civically active family, we volunteer as much as our schedules will bear, we are involved members of Galloway United Methodist Church in Jackson and we are all passionate readers, debaters and occasional protestors. I am very excited to take a more active role with the League through my new position on your board.

Your other board members include Deloris Lee, administrative vice president; Elaine Talbot, membership director; Gene Everitt, treasurer; Anna Hall, vice president for voter services; Megan Tidwell, secretary; Alice Skelton, national issues director; Annie Reiher, state issues director; Savina Schoenhofer, newsletter editor; and Joy Parikh, social media and public relations director.

Our first meeting of 2018-2019 is a member recruitment brunch Saturday, Sept. 15, at the First Presbyterian Church in Fondren. All members are asked to bring a brunch dish to share; beverages will be provided. Our speaker is former U.S. Attorney Brad Pigott, partner in the Pigott & Johnson law firm (continued next column)

New Member and Recruitment News

Please make welcome new member Deej Curry. After having a delightful conversation with her by phone I am convinced that she will be an enthusiastic addition to our growing Jackson League community. (see member profile)

Our September meeting focuses on new member recruitment. We are all encouraged to invite women and men who are interested in voting rights and good government to attend this and any League meeting. Please bring a guest or guests with you as often as you can. Thank you.

Report on National LWV Issues

By Alice Skelton

For the past 2 years LWVUS has been holding stakeholder meetings and using outside consulting firms to guide us through the process. The purpose of this extensive study was to ensure LWV becomes stronger, more visible, and more relevant. There has been and continues to be input from local league leaders, LWVUS Council of 2017, several focus groups and analysis of similar outside organizations. The results to date are summarized in a document (which is a work-in-progress) called the LWV Transformation Roadmap.

The five main conclusions include:

1. Uncertain strategic focus;
2. Lack of sufficient organizational alignment;
3. A structure that is an impediment to organizational effectiveness and efficiency;
4. A culture that has failed to adapt to current trends in volunteerism and embrace diverse populations; and
5. Deficits in organizational capacity, specifically staffing, communications, technology and fundraising.

The national board adopted the following mission, vision and value statements:

- Mission Statement: Empowering Voters. Defending Democracy.
- Vision Statement: We envision a democracy where every person has the desire, the right, the knowledge, and the confidence to participate.
- Value Statement: We believe in the power of women to create a more perfect democracy.

The LWV Transformation Roadmap is a 41-page document. It is worth reading. Here is a link to an Executive Summary of the Roadmap which is only 5 pages. The summary outlines the local, state and national roles in this Roadmap.
LWV: Tell me a bit about yourself (full name, where you live now, where you are from, family)?

DJC: My full name is Diane Jean Curry. My nickname and the name I use is Deej, shortened from my first and middle name by my mother the very first time I made her mad while I was still an infant to D.J. It was not the last time. It was further shortened by middle brother to Deej and that was that. I come from a large family that is very close. I was married more than 45 years. We chose not to have children. I have lived in numerous parts of the Pacific Northwest, most of them before the age of 4. I lived in and around Grants Pass, OR until I was 11. I still consider it my home town as I had family and still have friends in the area. From there my family moved to the San Francisco Bay Area where I grew the rest of the way up, started college, went to work, met and married. Over the years my husband’s work took us to England, back to California, then Texas and finally Mississippi.

LWV: How long have you lived in the Jackson area and what have been your activities since living here (jobs, other organization memberships, etc.)?

DJC: I have lived here in north Jackson for 13+ years. I read, travel, keep up with family and friends and am active in many causes, but mostly I have perfected the art of doing nothing. If you were to ask me after a busy day doing what I want, I would say “oh, nothing much, you? I belong to Planned Parenthood, LWV, most of the museums in town and several animal organizations and museums elsewhere. I am an independent voter who chooses candidates and issues over parties.

LWV: When did you join the League of Women Voters of the Jackson Area, and what drew you to the organization?

DJC: After trying to get in touch with the Jackson LWV when I first moved here, with no luck, I was at the Ms. Civil Rights Museum in May, talking to one of their docents when I found out she was a member and got all the information I needed to join. I had been a member of both the California and Texas LWV since I became a voter. I even voted absentee while I was in England. I had my mom send me all the necessary information and LWV pamphlets. California’s LWV publishes the initiative information pamphlet every year.

LWV: What were some key political issues in Mississippi and nationally at the time you first joined the League?

DJC: In California, it was Vietnam, women’s rights, the start of the environmental movement, agricultural workers’ rights and many others.

LWV: Describe your involvement in the League over the years (offices held, committee work, etc.).

DJC: I held no offices. I worked on voter drives and membership drives at other protest events. I gave when I had the money.

LWV: Why has the League remained important to you?

DJC: They offer information and help on voter issues, they sponsor candidate forums and debates and forum on other voting issues.
The LWV-MS held its annual council at St. Peter’s Episcopal Church in Oxford, MS on May 18-19. The itinerary included two panel discussions, a LWV-MS business meeting and a keynote speaker. Oxford Mayor Robyn Tannehill welcomed the League of Women Voters and spoke about the Girl emPowerment Program, whose primary goal is to encourage dialogue among classmates with differing opinions at elementary schools. The first panel focused on Women Writers with a discussion of support and obstacles for women writers in Oxford featuring Ann Abadie, Sarah Frances Hardy, and Lisa Howorth.

The second panel focused on Women Leaders with a discussion of the obstacles and challenges facing women in leadership positions featuring Baretta Mosley, Katrina Caldwell, and Julia Thornton.

The Business meeting highlight included recognizing LWVOXNMS as a chapter of LWV-MS. The keynote speaker, Representative Jay Hughes, gave a speech entitled, “How Legislation is Made in Mississippi.”

without bias or partisanship. They give you a place to understand without judgement.

LWV: Has League membership given you an opportunity to make an impact on your community? How?

DJC: Voter registration, mostly.

LWV: Do you have a particular League memory you could share?

DJC: Not one in particular but many moments of shared community and personal and social interaction. (note:

LWV: What are current political issues that particularly pique your interest?

DJC: Voter rights, civil rights, immigration rights, education, environmentalism, not necessarily in that order.

LWV: What do you see as the strengths of the League of Women Voters? What keeps the League relevant?

DJC: Most importantly, its non-partisanship and its dedication to unbiased information. The need for it, and its new younger members.

LWV: How might the League reach out to new, younger, more diverse members?

DJC: Have programs and events at colleges and high schools, reach out to young people’s groups that don’t have voter programs or to help with the programs they have. Advertise in school newspapers, particularly online.

LWV: Anything else you would like for us to know about you? When you see me, just ask. I’m always willing to talk. Just remember that I’m not offended if you say “that’s enough”.
